Lynchburg General Hospital announces CARE Program

on Tuesday of last week.

Mr. Lockridge explained, "For every hospital in-patient, six others are treated in out-patient visits, at a financial saving to the individual and to the Hospital as well. But this trend places enormous demands on our supporting services." He explained that the laboratory's workload had increased nearly three times since 1963, largely due to rising out-patient use, and radiology services, including x-ray, have risen three and one-half times for the same reason. Much of the out-patient use of both departments is due to the growing demands of the Hospital emergency facility, the only one in the area fully staffed for around-the-clock service.

"The move of our obstetrics and medical pediatrics services to Virginia Baptist Hospital in 1972, in another of our many cooperative endeavors to provide constantly improving health care to the area, released space which will enable us to make these needed changes. In addition, we are providing some 4,500 square feet of new construction," Mr. Lockridge noted.

A portion of this new space will house equipment for cobalt theraphy, a treatment for which area residents numbering at least 200 a year must presently travel to Charlottesville, often daily for periods up to six weeks. Cobalt theraphy has been called the region's number one health care need by the Lynchburg Academy of Medicine and the Central Virginia Health Planning Council.

"Our citizens have come to expect more than just short-term, emergency medical services, and in a prosperous, growing area it is surely our responsibility to provide all levels of professional health care, from acute to long-term or rehabilitative services. Our C-A-R-E program is our assurance to the Greater Lynchburg area that we shall not fail in this commitment," Mr. Lockridge concluded.

plant at Appomattox, Va. It is scheduled to begin production before the end of 1974.

Another Armstrong affiliate, E. B. Carpet Mills, Inc., purchased the Keysville yarn spinning mill of Danville Industries, Inc. in 1972. This Keysville plant, which has substantially increased production since that time, produces a portion of the carpet yarns used in E & B's carpet manufacturing plants at Dalton, Ga. , and Winchester, Tenn., and in an Armstrong carpet plant at Marietta, Pa.

A graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Jones began his Armstrong career in 1947. He served as a cost analyst, then production planning manager, at the company's plant in Braintree, Mass. He continued in production planning work until 1956, when he was named general production manager of Armstrong's Building and Industry Products Operations. In 1968 he was elected a vice-president of the company and named general manager of the newly formed Carpet Operations. He was elected a senior vice-president in 1973.

State of Local Enviornment

1. Sixty-four acres of critically eroding (gullied) land was protected with permanent vegetative cover. Grass cover stops erosion and helps keep our streams clear.

2. Twelve acres of grassed waterways were established in drainageways of cropland.

3. Twenty-one wildlife and irrigation ponds constructed.

Ponds help reduce flooding and catch eroding soil to reduce stream pollution.

4. Nearly 3,000 acres of grassland was established or improved under planned grazing systems. Better grassland means less erosion and stream pollution.

5. One hundred eighty-six acres of new strip cropping established to reduce erosion and stream pollution.

6. Nine miles of open drains constructed.

7. Two miles of underground drains established.

8. Four springs developed and piped by gravity to livestock watgering troughs.

9. Two animals waste lagoons constructed. Lagoons prevent stream pollution by animal waste.

10. Nineteen acres of recreation land graded and seeded.

11. Thirty-one complete conservation plans prepared and dozens of conservation problems investigated and solutions recommended.

The Virginia Division of Forestry assisted individual landowners plant 946 acres of pine seedlings and improve 904 acres of existing timber. They also prepared timberland examination and management plans for 9,580 acres.

In addition to more timber products, well managed woodland is the best watershed cover - has the lowest soil and water runoff. Woodland also provides much for wildlife and recreation.

About 25 acres of wildlife plantings were made and 21 farm ponds were stocked with game fish and managed for recreation.

Much of the conservation work was restoration as result of Hurricane Agnes: sixty-six miles of streams in the district were cleared of debris and blockages or eroding banks vegetated with grasses and legumes for erosion control and wildlife. Experimental plantings of 55,000 Basket Willow have been made on the banks of Buffalo River and its tributaries in an attempt to control stream-bank erosion. An additional 150,000 will be planted.

Floodwaters damaged 561 acres of bottomland. This land was repaired by grading for agricultural production. Financial assistance to retore flood damaged land was provided by ASCS with land-owners sharing restoration cost. Soil Conservation Service provided the engineering and agronomic assistance.

Some of the continuing projects include:

1. An urban conservation project in Lynchburg to demonstrate various plants, mulches, and conservation techniques.

2. Watershed protection projects. Buffalo River watershed plan has been submitted for final approval. it is hopeful operation will be authorized for FY 1975. Preliminary field and aerial surveys are being conducted on the Upper Appomattox Watershed.

3. Flood plain analysis are being made on Piney and Buffalo Rivers. Flood prone bottomland along Pedlar River will also be defined.

4. Soil survey data and water resources data have been provided to many landowners and local governments. In addition to individuals, engineers, sanitarians, and planners must base land use decisions on the capability of the land.

At the Conservation Awards Banquet, E. Carter Martin was recognized as the most outstanding conservation farmer in the district. Martin went on to capture the area award.

Broadening the base of local leadership in conservation is an objective of the district. The district recognized the League of Women Voters of Lynchburg for leadership in the promotion of conservation.
